The Corks

The diagram illustrates a complex network of relationships, likely representing a botanical or historical data set. The central intersection is marked by four large, bold labels: N70 Wine Society, K70 Dolamore, W70 Peatling & Cawdron, and S70 Avery. These labels are positioned at the corners of the central area, with their respective data points radiating outwards. The nodes are arranged in a grid-like pattern, with lines connecting them. The nodes are labeled with names and years, often with 'bot.' (botanical) or 'The Wine Society' (for N70) or 'Dolamore' (for K70) or 'Avery' (for S70). The connections form a dense web, with many lines crossing each other. The overall structure is symmetrical across the central intersection.

The logo is a circular emblem. The outer ring contains the text "Justerini & Brooks" at the top and "Fonseca 1970" at the bottom, separated by small gaps. Inside the ring, there is a stylized illustration of a tree on the left and a building on the right, both rendered in a simple, line-art style. The tree has a thick trunk and a rounded canopy. The building has a central tower and two smaller wings on either side. The entire emblem is set against a white background.
